OUR SCHOOLS, OUR SAFETY, OUR SAY!!!

What will the re-opening of schools actually look like? That's the $1 million question that everyone wants answered. Here's what we know:

A few weeks ago, Governor Roy Cooper announced that schools would operate on Plan B when school resumes on August 17, which is a hybrid of online and in-person learning. Back in late spring, he charged schools with developing a three-tier plan for re-opening: Plan A – all in-person learning, Plan B, and Plan C – remote-only learning. The governor stated that schools are not allowed to use Plan A. Click here for an NCAE FAQ on reopening rules.

NCAE leaders worked closely with Governor Cooper to come up with the best plan for educators and its 1.5 million school children. "The careful approach that Governor Cooper took in all of his reopening decisions is deeply appreciated, and while we understand the difficult choice, we must make the safety of our educators and students the first priority," said NCAE President Tamika Walker Kelly in a statement to the media. "Unfortunately, educators and parents have been presented with a false dichotomy: the public schools we love, or our safety. We can have both. In order to safely reopen all schools in the way that will protect the health of both students and educators, a significant amount of resources is required. The General Assembly has simply refused to appropriate them. This General Assembly must step up and do their jobs to provide the necessary funding for public schools so that educators can do their jobs to safely educate all of North Carolina's students. NCAE members have been on the front lines of this pandemic ever since it began. We have supported and led families through the greatest period of uncertainty of our lifetime. We intend to lead our communities so that when we see our students and families again, we are able to welcome them into fully resourced, and safe learning and working environments for all of us."

In an effort to secure proper safety measures for educators and students, NCAE launched the "Our Schools, Our Safety, Our Say" campaign over the summer. Members were asked to sign a petition that demanded the General Assembly:

- 1) Keep public school funding intact. Absolutely no cuts to the 2020-21 budget.
- 2) Follow and fund all strong schools requirements and recommendations published by the Department of Health and Human Services.
- 3) Meet with NCAE to create safe school re-entry plans that respect students, families, and staff. As of press time, more than 17,000 signatures had been collected (click here to sign the petition if you have not already done so).

NCAE leaders will be keeping these demands at the forefront as they await legislators' scheduled return to Raleigh in September.

Because safety is a major concern for the successful re-opening of schools, the Association hosted a tele town hall last month with Dr. Mandy Cohen, secretary of the N.C. Department of Health and Human Services, Dr. Elizabeth Tilson, state health director and chief medical officer, and Susan Perry, chief deputy secretary. Dr. Cohen discussed measures the state will take to help keep educators and students safe, and answered members' questions and concerns about the COVID-19 virus. Schools will be required to perform daily temperature and health screening checks, maintain 6 feet of social distancing, and face coverings will be mandatory for all school employees and students. Click here to see the information referenced by Dr. Cohen.

During the town hall meeting, a poll was conducted of members giving them an opportunity to share which school re-opening plan they thought is better suited for North Carolina – 12 percent chose Plan B, 69 percent chose Plan C, and a little less than 3 percent were unsure.

Over the coming weeks, and for as long it takes, NCAE will continue to work with the governor, health officials, and lawmakers to ensure that our students and staff remain safe and healthy, and that the best learning options are implemented. Regular updates will be forthcoming through the Association's social media sites and other communications venues.
